

Kira found the coding classes at school boring and she did not pay attention in class as she felt the teacher was too fast for her and only catered to a select few. ^{people who showed interest (mainly boys)} She found out about Black-Cess from her friend Sarah and after seeing the app in action, decided to download it on her phone and try it out. She was very pleased with the overall simplicity and aesthetic of the app and the fact that she got rewarded with achievement points for each question she answered correctly gave her a sense of accomplishment and left her wanting. Like Sarah, she convinced her parents to buy her the full version. She has gotten so good at it now that it has boosted her confidence in class and she now does not hesitate to get involved and share ideas with and help others who are struggling. Sarah and her have even requested its use for the subject which the teachers are seriously considering.
